Dear Mona Petri,

I am sorry to tell you this but the conference organizers for the World Renewable Energy Assembly have changed their conference policy: Members of Parliament have to pay a reduced admission fee which amounts to 50EUR per day per person.
I am sorry, the change is due to regulations for non-profit organisations in Germany.
They are not allowed not to charge the attendees.

I hope that this will not prevent any of the four MPs to attend the conference!

Please excuse this modification!

Comisia pentru Administratie Publica LocalaSent: Wed 9/12/2007 12:47 PMFrom: WCRE [info@wcre.org]To: Comisia pentru Administratie Publica LocalaCc:*Subject: Invitation to the Second World Renewable Energy Assembly (WREA) 2007, November 19th - 21st, 2007, Bonn/GermanyAttachments:

Second World Renewable Energy Assembly (WREA) 2007, November 19th - 21st, 2007,
Bonn, World Conference Center

Dear Ladies and Gentlemen,

We cordially invite you to the Second World Renewable Energy Assembly (WREA). The first World Assembly took place in November 2005 in Bonn. Its precursors were the World Forum for Renewable Energy (hosted in Berlin in 2002 and in Bonn in 2004) as well as the International Parliamentary Forum that took place in parallel to the International Governmental Conference renewables 2004.

The Second World Assembly will combine these two formats. The conference presents a unique opportunity for advocates of renewable energy to exchange ideas with parliamentarians belonging to the newly established World Renewable Energy Parliamentary Network and to learn about and develop collective strategies how to best promote renewable energies worldwide.

The Second World Renewable Energy Assembly presents solutions for an accelerated global introduction of renewable energies and defines the necessary policy instruments. Central focus of the conference is the global target of a 100% supply of energy that comes from renewable energy sources. The conference names the obstacles that have yet to be overcome and at the same time shows how the target of "100% Renewable Energy globally" can be attained and how the public can be motivated towards achieving this goal ("mission possible").

The Second World Assembly wants to give clear impetus to prioritising renewable energies in the national and international energy debate. The conference will make clear that the shift towards renewables will not come as a burden for the national economies but as a unique chance. If the adequate policy instruments are applied in a consistent and competent way, this shift will be accomplished much quicker than most might expect.

Yours sincerely

Second World Renewable Energy Assembly (WREA) 2007

November 19th - 21st, 2007, Bonn, World Conference Center

Chairmen's message

We cordially invite you to the Second World Renewable Energy Assembly (WREA). The first World Assembly took place in November 2005 in Bonn. Its precursors were the World Forum for Renewable Energy (hosted in Berlin in 2002 and in Bonn in 2004) as well as the International Parliamentary Forum that took place in parallel to the International Governmental Conference renewables 2004.

The Second World Assembly will combine these two formats. The conference presents a unique opportunity for advocates of renewable energy to exchange ideas with parliamentarians belonging to the newly established World Renewable Energy Parliamentary Network and to learn about and develop collective strategies how to best promote renewable energies worldwide.

The Second World Renewable Energy Assembly presents solutions for an accelerated global introduction of renewable energies and defines the necessary policy instruments. Central focus of the conference is the global target of a 100% supply of energy that comes from renewable energy sources. The conference names the obstacles that have yet to be overcome and at the same time shows how the target of "100% Renewable Energy globally" can be attained and how the public can be motivated towards achieving this goal ("mission possible").

Session I looks at the necessary paradigmatic changes and provides status reports from different regions of the world. Session II displays a range of different reasons for the urgent and global shift to renewable energies. The conference will show that climate change is not the only problem that necessitates the shift to renewable energies: Culminating shortages in fresh water supply in many regions of the world, damages to people's health, induced by the deployment of conventional energy sources, and the growing threat of international political tensions call for a fundamental change of the global energy system. Furthermore, this session will demonstrate that the shift towards renewable energies has clear advantages - also economically - over current approaches of CO₂ capture and storage and the global emission trading system.

Session III addresses convincing integrated scenarios as well as projects that are already under way, both aiming at a 100% supply with renewable energies.

Session IV presents the necessary "next steps" that will ultimately lead to a global breakthrough of renewable energies.

The Second World Assembly wants to give clear impetus to prioritising renewable energies in the national and international energy debate. The conference will make clear that the shift towards renewables will not come as a burden for the national economies but as a unique chance. If the adequate policy instruments are applied in a consistent and competent way, this shift will be accomplished much quicker than most might expect.
