Subject: Space Hearing Invitation from Graham Watson, MEP

Dear Mr. Teodorescu,

I am writing to invite you for an international parliamentary hearing on space policy, which will take place on November 7, 2007 in the European Parliament, Brussels, organised by the e-Parliament. At the hearing, legislators from Africa, Asia and the Americas will meet with European legislators to discuss how best to balance cooperation and competition in the civil and military uses of outer space. The importance of this question has been highlighted by the recent Chinese test of an anti-satellite weapon, the growing problems of space debris, and the increasingly difficult debate on missile defence between Europe, the US and Russia.

The e-Parliament is a fairly new global forum, which engages national and regional legislators through polls and hearings to exchange policy ideas and to work together across borders on issues of common concern. Space policy is one of a number of areas we are working in.

The e-Parliament held a first hearing in the US Congress in September 2005 focused specifically on space weapons and missile defence. It brought together US legislators and members of defence and foreign affairs committees from around the world, representing a wide range of views on the case for and against space weapons. A detailed report from that event can be found at www.e-parl.net.

Our hearing in Brussels on November 7 will - as outlined in the programme below - take a broader view and consider both the military and civil uses of space, the challenges facing each of the two areas as well as the overlaps and competition between them. Outer space is often referred to as a new frontier of opportunities for humankind. But it is not limitless, and if everyone is to benefit, we must find ways to carefully balance cooperation and competition in this global commons.

All the best,

Graham Watson,
Member of the European Parliament
and the e-Parliament Council.
