Pellets – a sustainable fuel!

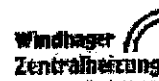

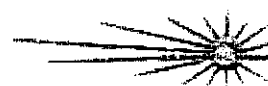

Pellets are a clean, CO₂-neutral and convenient fuel with growing market shares in many European countries. The European Pellet Conference in Wels/Austria aims to provide in-depth information on pellet technologies, innovation and market trends. It will also offer an exciting platform to discuss new co-operation projects.

With more than 600 participants every year, the European Pellet Conferences & Fora held in Wels have become the largest annual pellet event in the world.

The European Pellet Conference 2009 is held as a part of the World Sustainable Energy Days which offer a number of other high-profile events:

- the "Energiesparmesse", a trade show dedicated to renewable energy sources and energy efficiency with about 100,000 visitors. Around 100 companies will present their pellet related products and services there.
- site-visits (24 February 2009)
- the "Energy Efficiency Watch" Conference
- the conference "Efficient Cooling of Buildings"
- other events

The conference is organised by O.Ö. Energiesparverband, the regional energy agency of Upper Austria, dedicated to sustainable energy market development. Upper Austria is an ideal location for such a conference. The region is home to a number of Europe's leading biomass boiler producers, and pellet heating systems have become a standard solution.
